

Drop Anchor! K-N Cameras Record a Big Day for Albany---and Nijmegen

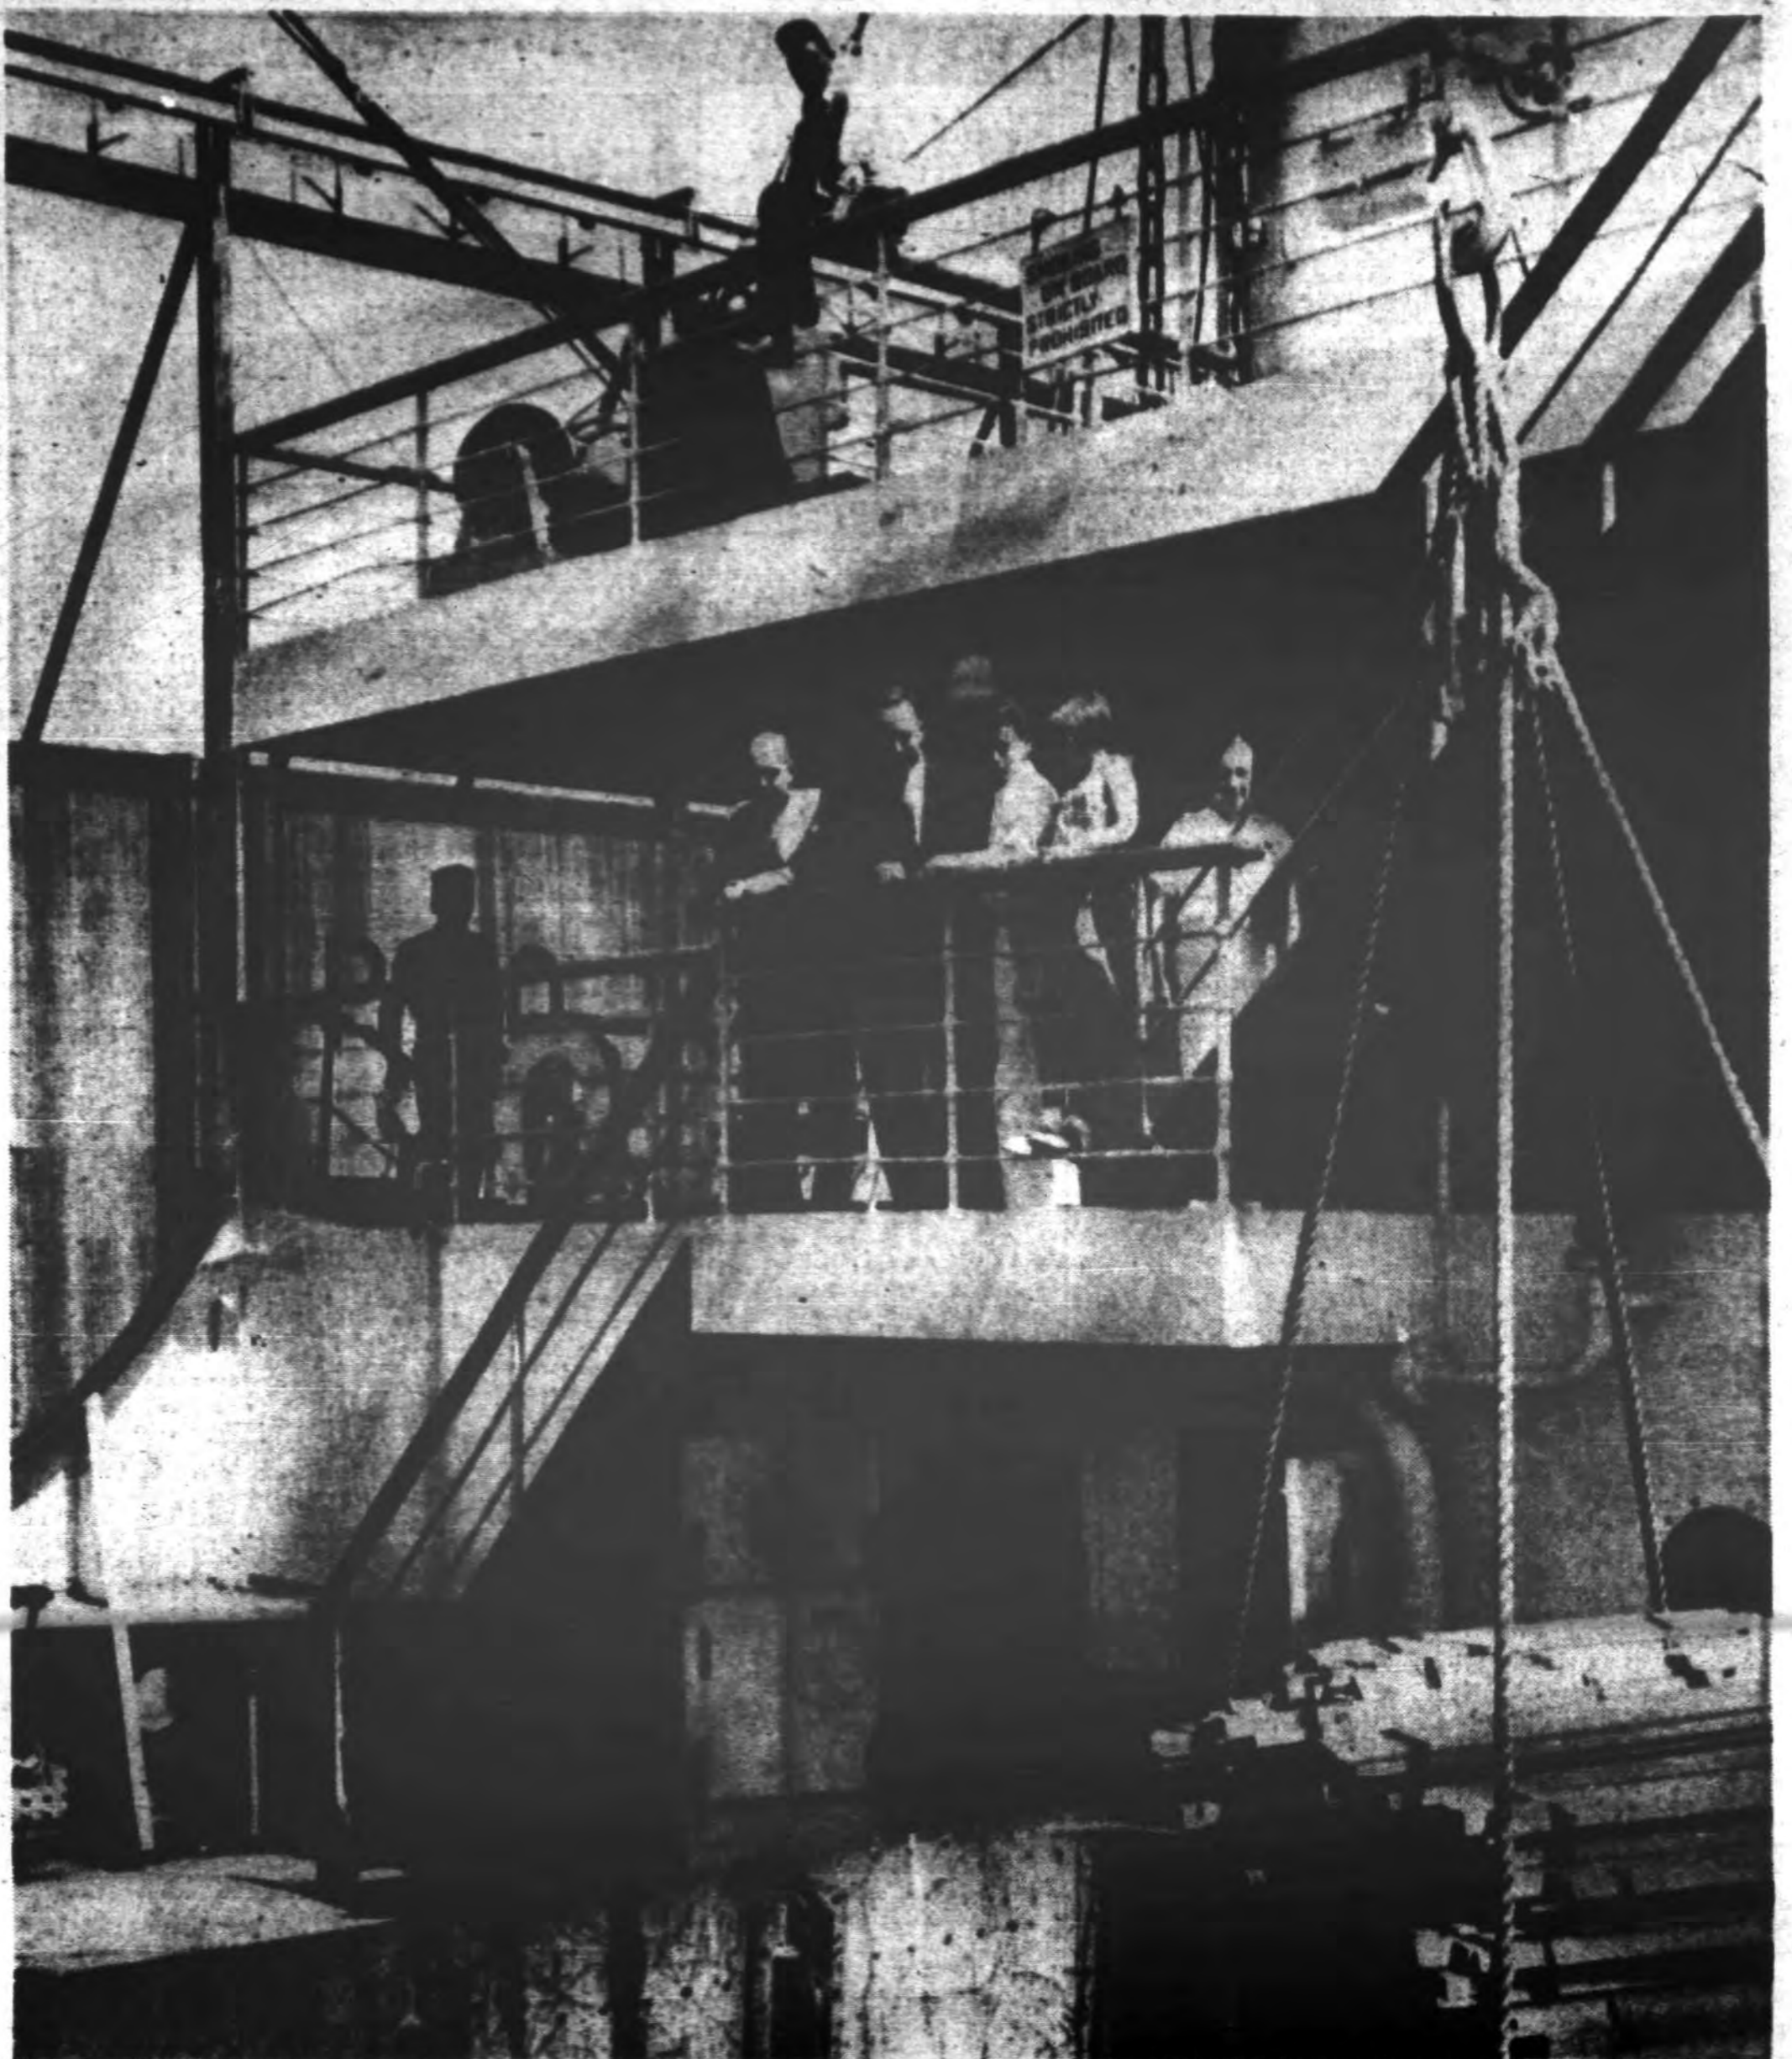

DISCUSS AID—Capt. Arie V. Kooy of the Holland America liner, Westerdam is shown with Mayor Corning, honorary chairman of the Albany-Nijmegen Committee for rehabilitation of the adopted Dutch city. Captain Kooy gave an official reception and dinner for members of the committee and their guests aboard the Westerdam last night.

HONOR GUESTS—Mrs. Corning, left, wife of Albany's mayor, chats with Mr. and Mrs. Jan Vieweg, North Chatham, during the reception aboard the Westerdam last night. Mr. and Mrs. Vieweg have been designated Albany's emissaries to Nijmegen.

FIRST FAMILY—Mayor Corning, second from left, and his son, Erasmus Corning 3d, and his daughter, Bettina, today kept watch as the relief cargo for Nijmegen was loaded on the liner Westerdam. At left is Jan C. Vieweg, Chatham Center, who with Mrs. Vieweg will sail July 9 on the Westerdam as Albany's emissaries to Nijmegen. The liner will go to Rotterdam where the Nijmegen cargo will be transferred to a river boat.

MAKING SHIP FAST—Dock workers complete last minute adjustments as the Holland America liner Westerdam was made fast to the dock at the Port of Albany yesterday near this pile of relief cargo. The ship sailed up the Hudson with an expert pilot on the bridge.

WESTERDAM ARRIVES—This picture was taken as the 12,000-ton Dutch ship Westerdam prepared to dock at the Port of Albany. The liner's appearance on the Hudson brought several telephone calls to The Knickerbocker News from excited residents of river towns. The Westerdam today took on a shipment of relief supplies for Nijmegen, Albany's adopted Dutch city.

K-N GUESTS—The latest school group to inspect The Knickerbocker News plant was this party from the sixth grade at Elmers Grade School. Here they smile for the photographer after seeing how a newspaper is produced each day.

THE WEARY REST—Some "campers" at the Ridgefield YMCA Day Camp catch up on sleep when rest period rolls around while the more rugged reach for their comic books. The camp is open for a six-week period ending Aug. 22. These boys have been spending their time swimming, playing games and learning handicrafts.
