

Nijmegen Greet Albany Via TV Show

Sixteen years after Albany "adopted" a war-ravaged Dutch city, the gratitude of the latter was again expressed in a message beamed through-out the United States via television.

Nijmegen, interviewed by host Hugh Downs on the NBC "Today" show, spoke of Albany's Mayor Erastus Corning III as "our good friend, who was so helpful to us after the war." The program carried by WRGB, Channel 6, was taped in Holland, where the "Today" cast and crew spent a week. Nijmegen, considered the strongest core of resistance to the Germans during World War 2, was doubly victimized. Much of its population was sent to slave labor camps. Its homes were looted, its property wantonly destroyed. On Feb. 22, 1944, the heart of the city was virtually wiped out when it was bombed by Allied forces by error. Later the U. S. 82nd Airborne Division liberated the city, and when the Germans retreated in May, 1945, Nijmegen faced a long struggle for survival.

In March, 1947, Albany "adopted" the stricken sister city and sent a committee, including Richard Lewis of The Times-Union, to investigate specific needs of the Nijmegen people.

Acting on their findings, Albanians conducted an extensive campaign to provide clothing, food and household furnishings. Toys for 28,000 Nijmegen children were sent, reaching them in time for St. Nicholas Day in Holland, Dec. 6, 1947.

Since that time, Nijmegen and the New York State's capital which traces its ancestry to Dutch settlers have remained in close rapport and the friendship of the two mayors has continued.

Mr. Dake, board chairman of Saratoga Dairy Inc. at Saratoga Springs, originated the idea for the machine. He said the idea came when he and his wife were visiting in El Salvador three years ago.

CSEA Asserts State Violates Overtime Pact

A charge that the State intends to break its employment agreements with more than 6,000 employees by excluding them from the right to earn overtime was leveled yesterday by the Civil Service Employees Association.

Joseph F. Feily, association president, said new overtime rules, scheduled to go into effect today, would exclude 16,000 to 17,000 state employees. About 10,000 of these are not able to earn overtime credits under the present rules.

The charge by Mr. Feily followed a meeting he had with State Budget Director T. Norman Hurd at which he urged adoption of several proposals relating to overtime situation. One proposal, which was turned down, was for further postponement of the effective date of the rules.

The CSEA committee studying the rules charged at a meeting last Thursday in Albany that "the new rules are a direct violation of the work contract between most of the affected employees and the State" and that they "amount to nothing more than a 'work-for-nothing' policy and are an attempt to scuttle the state's maximum 40-hour work law."

The committee also said that should the rules go into effect May 1 as presently constituted, the state "would show an absence of good faith with its employees and would be knowingly changing conditions of employment without any consideration of its employees' rights."
